Porsche's CEO resigns

Finance chief also quits; board approves Qatar deal, paving way for VW

By Elizabeth Barlow
AND DANIA COHEN

Ferdinand Piëch, CEO of Porsche, has resigned, paving the way for Volkswagen to acquire the carmaker, according to a report from the Wall Street Journal. Piëch's resignation was announced on Sunday, July 22, 2007. The report also stated that Piëch's finance chief, Michael Steiner, had also resigned. The board of directors has approved a deal with Qatar, which will allow Volkswagen to acquire Porsche.

Ford posts profit, but debt remains

By Matthew Davis
AND STEVE HANCOCK

Ford Motor Co. reported its second consecutive quarterly profit on Sunday, but the company's debt remains a major concern. Ford's profit was $1.1 billion, or 17 cents a share, on revenue of $12.1 billion. The company's debt is $10.5 billion, or 17 cents a share. Ford's debt is a concern because it could limit the company's ability to invest in new technologies and expand its production.

Spain's battle against wildfire enters fifth day

Spain's battle against a wildfire that started on Monday is still raging. Spanish firefighters are working to contain the fire, which has burned for five days. The fire has destroyed several homes and is threatening more. Firefighters are using water and fire retardant to fight the fire. The fire is still active and firefighters are working around the clock to contain it.
